

S. W. Chamber of Com. to Stage Picnic Aug 21th.

The Southwest Towns Chamber of Commerce is going to hold a rousing big picnic August 21st in the Forest Preserve on 143rd street in Orland Park, in which all the local units of the Chamber of Commerce from Chicago to St. Louis will take part or will be represented.

Plans are being formulated for a big parade with gaily decorated floats, plenty of music and dancing afternoon and evening. There will be all kinds of concessions and all kinds of amusements. Plenty of refreshments and eats will be on sale on the grounds.

Invitations are being sent out to Len Small, candidate for governor of Illinois, Frank L. Smith of Dwight and to many other candidates for public office this fall. It is the plan of the entertainment committee to have as many of the high lights of the political firmament present as possible.

Thousands of visitors are expected from all along the proposed line of the Southwest Highway from Marley to Sauemin and points beyond. This will be the largest outing the Southwest Towns Chamber of Commerce has ever sponsored.

The big objective of the Southwest Chamber of Commerce is the completion of the gap of 50 miles of paving on the Southwest Highway from the Cook County line near Marley to Sauemin.

In a recent speech at Campus, Senator Simon Lentz of Congressville stated that with the completion of the Southwest highway the distance between Chicago and St. Louis will be lessened fifty miles which would mean a saving in oil and gas to the sum of approximately $2,000,000 a year for the motorists using this major highway.

Everybody is invited to attend this great picnic and meet the road boosters from other towns and counties.

Seeks Aid of Garden Clubs to Save Valuable Trees

C. M. Cleveland who has been opposing the routing of the Wolf road paving thru his timberland on the grounds that many valuable trees would be destroyed, is now enlisting the aid of Garden Clubs to assist him in his fight against this road.

Recently he showed members of the Joliet Garden Club thru his woodland and they were enthused greatly over the natural beauty of the tract and agreed that it would be a shame to have a road built thru this woodland. Mrs. Jennings and Mrs. Melcher of Joliet, heads of the Garden Club of Joliet, called in Mokena Saturday and are endeavoring to have the Mokena Garden Club join hands with them to protest to the county officials against routing Wolf Road thru this woodland. They maintain that the Wolf Road could be routed around this tract.

A story is going the rounds that the state highway officials do not know of the beauty of the woodland for if they did they would not approve the routing of the Wolf Road thru this land.

This is a mistaken notion for the highway officials, both county and state know about the woodland in question and all about its beauty and feel that with the construction of a hard road thru the woodland its beauties would be accessible to the public which at present it is not.

Mr. Cleveland is decidedly opposed to having Wolf Road routed thru this woodland from Mokena to the Lincoln highway, but is in favor of having it routed either westward along the present gravel road site or to the east of his woodland tract. Neither locations are acceptable to the county at present.

Lightning Strikes Barn at Tinley

During a thunderstorm Tuesday evening lightning struck a big barn on the old Jake Bormet farm on 123rd and Central Avenues near Oak Forest. The barn and all its contents was destroyed, as also was an adjoining poultry house. Many fowls also were burned. The Midlothian fire department was called but the blaze was beyond control.

Former Mokena Resident Dies In Lockport Saturday

Miss Maria Besinius, 71 years old, sister of Mrs. Mary Hostert of Mokena, died Saturday morning at the home of Mrs. Reed in Lockport with whom she had been making her home. The hot weather and heart trouble is thought to have been the cause of death.

Miss Besinius was born in Homer township, July 12, 1861 and lived nearly all her life in Homer township and Lockport. For a few years she lived in Mokena with her sister and with the Barney Hostert family.

Funeral services were held from the Clarence L. Miller funeral home in Lockport Monday morning at 8:30 o'clock and to St. Joseph's Catholic church at 9 o'clock with the Rev. C. A. Knur, officiating. Burial was in St. Michael's cemetery, Homer township.

Herald-News—

Marley had two big days last week during which several thousand people visited the town to view one of the biggest freight train wrecks in the history of the Wabash railroad in this section in which 23 cars were wrecked and the Marley depot which was built over 50 years ago was completely wiped out when a box car crashed thru the structure.

The wreck occurred last Friday morning when a thru freight train of 52 cars running from Chicago to Decatur was derailed when an arch bar on a car load of gravel broke and ripped up the track north of the Marley depot with the result that 23 cars were piled up. A Pere Marquette steel box car loaded with salt was driven thru the depot reducing it to kindling wood. The track was ripped up for a quarter of a mile and the passing track was also damaged. One final feature of the wreck was a steel rail driven thru the floor of the car loaded with salt and forced thru the car roof. The end of the rail was bent into a curve.

The train carried only 8 loaded cars consisting of 7 cars of stone and one car of salt. The rest of the cars were empty refrigerator and a few tank cars. The accident occurred about 6 a. m., and very few of the Marley residents heard the crash and were much surprised to find a big wreck in their midst. Everyone was congratulating Louis Nelson the local depot agent that he was not in the depot at the time of the wreck, for had he been it would have meant sure death. The wreck occurred just half an hour before the time he usually went on duty.

Conductor White was the only person hurt in the wreck. He was in the caboose at the time and the sudden stop of the train threw him against a desk injuring his side and hand, but he was able to be about.

Engineer J. M. Coons who has served as engineer for 21 years, said this was his first wreck.

After the passing track was repaired trains were detoured around the wreck. Wrecking crews and derricks from Chicago and Decatur worked all day Friday and Saturday and by Saturday evening had the wreck cleaned up.

Several thousand people from all the surrounding territory and from Joliet flocked to Marley Friday and Saturday to view the big smash and a battery of photographers were busy taking pictures. Newspaper men were on the job and for a few hours Marley was on the map and was written up in the Chicago papers. The accompanying picture shows some of the havoc wrought.

The Wabash railroad had been contemplating closing the Marley depot within the next few weeks and the Marley people had been circulating a petition protesting this action.

A box car depot is in use now. It is used mostly for freight business.

News-Bulletin Staff Enjoys Outing

The News-Bulletin force and their families and friends making a group of 24 members enjoyed a delightful picnic in the forest preserve on Harlem avenue east of Orland Park all day last Sunday. A wonderful time was enjoyed. Games were played and some good ball players were discovered. Music was furnished by the three aces, Carlos, Alva and Wanda Hall. The force hopes to make these picnics annual affairs.

Tinley Gardens In Lions Club Contest Judged

There was an inspection of the yards and gardens entered in the Yard and Garden Contest sponsored by the Lions Club of Tinley Park on Thursday of this week. The inspection was made by all out of town judges from names furnished by the Garden Chairwoman of the Illinois Federation of Woman's Clubs, Mrs. Wallace B. Combs of Tinley Park. The judges were:

Mrs. A. Lassman, Mrs. T. Kauffman, Mrs. Wm. Hawk, all of Chicago; Mrs. George Ward, Palos Park; Mrs. F. A. Tooley, Mokena; Mrs. S. Ohlval, Oak Forest. All of these ladies are experienced in garden work and representatives of their local garden clubs.

They met at the home of Mrs. Wm Funk at 9:30 a. m. and from there were escorted in two groups of three each to the different gardens which have been entered in the contest.

After the judging the ladies were entertained at luncheon by Mrs. Combs at her home Idylwild.

Each yard and garden was inspected by the judges and scored by them and the score will be the marking which the garden inspected will receive.

It was thought that by using outside judges there can be no reasons for any partiality being shown, as the judges are unacquainted with the contestants. The final inspection will be made in about a month or six weeks later and then the rating of contestants and winners will be announced.

The Tinley Park Lions Club wishes at this time to express its appreciation and thanks to the different entrants to their first contest and to the co-operation of the Tinley Park Garden Club. Also to the ladies who have so generously given of their time to come so far to act as judges and to Mrs. Combs for acting as hostess to the judges.

Will Co. Pays Tax Bills

George W. Anderson, tax expert in the Will County clerk's office in Joliet, has completed the tax work on the 1930 taxes and finds that out of the total amount of four million dollars of the 1930 taxes, only $78,000 was forfeited for taxes and of this amount $63,000 was forfeited in Joliet township and only $15,000 in the rest of the county which shows that rural Will County pays its tax bills promptly.

TINLEY PARK AMERICAN LEGION AUXILIARY TO HOLD BUSINESS MEETING

By Florence Wheeler,
The Tinley Park American Legion Auxiliary held a regular social meeting Friday July 22 in the Community hall. Mrs. Southers, our distinguished guest, the fourth District Director, gave a very interesting talk. She spoke of the rapid growth of our unit, and the work we have accomplished. She also said that at the last Cook County meeting she was very much pleased to learn that the Tinley Park Unit had become very well known thru its various activities.

We also had with us McKnight past membership chairman of the fourth district, who gave us many words of encouragement. Other guests were: Mrs. R. J. Hug, who represented the Tinley Park Garden club, Mrs. A. Messenbrink, representative of the Royal Neighbors, both of these ladies extended greetings from their respective organizations. Mrs. Towel sang greetings to all guests, to the well-known tune, "Howdy-U-Doo", which went over big.

Mrs. Swisher rendered an original poem entitled, "Cheer Up" which during the time of depression certainly hit the nail on the head.

After the meeting luncheon was served. There were many lovely prizes and the Aux thanks Mrs. Fulton and Mrs. Medrow, who were hostesses. Home made ice cream and delicious cake finished up the evening.

Our Rehabilitation chairman, Mrs. Fulton, has been doing very good work. Recently she and Mrs. Wheeler brought many home made pies, cake, coffee cake and jelly to the Forty and Eight camp at Orland. All these goodies were donated by members and friends of the Unit, and Mrs. Fulton wishes at this time to thank all who helped her to carry this bundle of sunshine to the boys. "Not what we give, But what we share, For the gift without the giver is bare."

Our next meeting will be held Friday August 12 at the Community hall at eight o'clock.

the water is ice cold. Mr. Sauers has had geologists examine the spring and they are unable to tell how far the water comes from, but did find that the water comes thru a very rocky formation and think it flows for miles underground before it comes to the surface at Goeselville.

The Value of a Savings Account

Many people are saving more money now out of reduced incomes than they did in their most prosperous days.

They are doing this not because they have been told to be thrifty, but because the past two years have shown more clearly than ever before that there is no substitute for a steadily growing savings reserve in a strong, well managed bank.

Steady deposits made by the average citizens of every community, are laying a new and solid foundation for the progress of the future.

Volunteer Fire Dept. For Mokena Favored

The Mokena village board has discovered that the fire department end is not being kept up to efficiency. A meeting of the committee on fire and water with fire chief Herman Schweser is scheduled for this week end, with the view of testing out the fire hose and the hose cart and other fire apparatus. The board feels that a volunteer fire department should be organized same as in other towns, for by having an organized fire department fire insurance rates would be reduced as better fire protection would be assured. As it now is every one would have to help in case of a fire and there is no organized company and naturally the fire fighters would be inexperienced. At one time Mokena did have a good trained fire department.

Why not have one now?

Mokena Brotherhood to Picnic

Sunday, July 31st the St. John Brotherhood of Mokena invites you and your family to spend a pleasant day with them in Cappel's Grove. Come and watch the ball game between Mokena and Melrose Park. You may be the fortunate one to receive the beautiful 100 piece dinner set or any other of the many useful and attractive prizes to be offered. Plan to stay all afternoon. Supper will be served.

Mokena to Repair Front Street With Kyrook Material

The Mokena village board at their meeting Wednesday night placed an order for five tons of Kyrook with which to repair the front street. The material comes from Bowling Green, Kentucky and is used by cities in patching worn out pavements and is giving good results wherever used.

A sample of the material was used on the street in front of the Mokena State Bank building. A representative of the company called here last week and demonstrated the use of Kyrook.

Matteson Family Routed By Fire

Early Thursday morning the C. Lauer family was routed out by a fire which started in the attic of their home on Main street. The fire did much damage on the second floor and the first floor was badly drenched with water. Most of the furniture was taken from the house in time to be saved. The origin of the fire is unknown.

Mokena Dance Draws Big Crowd

The Mokena Men's Club reports a crowd of 500 persons at their dance last Saturday, which they say is a record breaking crowd. Much credit is given Sammy Berke and his orchestra for the fine attendance. Sammy has one of the best bands in northern Illinois.

Paving the way to stronger markets and better prices for dairy products, members of the Illinois dairy herd improvement associations are culling their cows at a record rate, thus reducing heavy surpluses of milk, it is reported by C. S. Rhode, dairy extension specialist of the college of agriculture, University of Illinois. During the first five months of 1932, members of the dairy improvement associations have culled out nearly 10 per cent of their cows and sold them for beef.

Illinois leads the corn belt states in the extent of state fair premium offerings for dairy cattle. Milton E. Jones, general manager of the Illinois State fair, has announced. In a communication to dairy cattle owners throughout Illinois and adjacent states, he urged that early entries be made so as to help advance the work of arranging stall room and in printing correctly the official program and entry list immediately after the entries close on August 1. The fair dates are August 20 to 27.

A bright spot in the state's industrial horizon is found at Sullivan where there is very little unemployment and cost of pauper relief is no larger than during the previous more prosperous years of other localities. Large pay rolls have been maintained by a shoe factory there, Illinois Masonic home and other substantial employers of labor.

Gov. Louis L. Emmerson spoke at a road celebration that was held July 20 in Anna, marking the completion of the new road from the Ohio to the Mississippi river. The road, known as Route 146, runs from Golconda on the Ohio river through Vienna and Anna and southward to the Mississippi river opposite Cape Girardeau, Mo.

The University of Illinois saved $472,700 of its budget for the fiscal year ended June 30, Lloyd Morey, comptroller, announced. This saving was represented by an unused balance in the state treasury funds already appropriated to the university, and amounted to approximately 10 per cent. The university budget for 1932-33, saving approximately $750,000 from the cost of operation for the coming year, was presented to the board of trustees for approval at their July meeting in Chicago by President Harry Woodburn Chase. The total saving for the two-year period would be about $1,250,000, under the budget.

Steel girders are all that remain of the structure above the state house dome, its old coverings having been peeled off by workmen who are preparing it for a new roof of zinc. The platform from which spectators used to gain a panorama of Springfield has been reduced to a skeleton, and minus the railing, it is no place for visitors at the present time. All will be restored when the work is completed.

The Chicago Association of Commerce has filed its appearance as a friend of the court in the suit to invalidate the 1932 Illinois income tax law now pending before the Supreme court of Illinois. Officers of the association contend that the new income tax law is void for want of constitutionality and because by taxing income from property, which is now taxed, it subjects such property to double taxation.

Tuberculosis eradication rules for dairy cattle of the state department of agriculture provide that counties with less than half of 1 per cent infection may be accredited as "T-B Free" for a period of three years. Tests performed in June brought about the issuance of accrediting certificates to five Illinois counties: Union, Pike, Putnam, Saline and Stark.

The state automobile department collected $16,059,844.92 in fees in the first six months of this year, according to figures announced by Secretary of State William J. Stratton. The semi-annual reports shows that 1,362,550 pairs of automobile license plates were sold in the first six months of the year. Of this number 1,203,750 were for passenger cars and 158,800 for trucks.

With installation of electric current completed for the Century of Progress exposition at Chicago in 1933, visitors are already able to visit the Lincoln group at night and view replicas of buildings associated with the life of the Great Emancipator—his log cabin birthplace at Hogenville, Ky., his boyhood home in what is now Lincoln City, Ind., the store in which he clerked and studied law at Salem, Ill., and the wigwam in which he was nominated for the Presidency in 1860.

Retail rates for natural gas in central Illinois have been declared 50 per cent too high, in a brief filed by municipalities with the Illinois commerce commission. The plaintiffs have asked that the commission establish its own cost-basis for wholesale natural gas.

A system of farm accounting has been inaugurated at the Jacksonville State hospital so that the financial status of the various activities is known at all times. An expert accountant who is a patient in one of the farm colonies does the work.

CHILDREN'S STORYBy
THORNTON W. BURGESS

The reckless tongue is quite the worst of all the things I know. So watch your tongue and guard your tongue, And let your tongue be slow.

A QUICK tongue is apt to be a reckless tongue, and a reckless tongue is one that says things without stopping to think if they be true or of what harm they may do by being repeated. The tongues of some people seem to be reckless all the time. Gossipy tongues almost always are reckless. Other tongues become reckless when their owners lose their tempers. It was this way with the tongue of Longlegs the Heron that beautiful summer day. Longlegs lost his temper and then he said things which he wouldn't have said if he had stopped to think.

You see Longlegs was very hungry and he waited patiently for a long, long time for his breakfast. You know Longlegs is a fisherman, and he is one of those who wait for their meals to come to them instead of going after them. Little Joe Otter is a fisherman, but he is the other kind. He is such a famous swimmer that he can chase and catch fish. Longlegs isn't a swimmer at all, so he has to wait for the fish to swim near enough to where he is standing for him to catch one by darting his long neck downward like lightning and snapping up the fish in his great spear-like bill.

So on this particular morning when Longlegs had waited and waited so patiently and at last a school of minnows had come swimming in almost within reach it had been more than he could stand to have Rattles the Kingfisher suddenly dart down and seize the biggest minnow Longlegs had counted as surely his, at the same time frightening away all the other minnows.

"You're a thief!" he screamed at Rattles. "You're a robber! That was my fish!"

Rattles the Kingfisher chuckled. It wasn't a pleasant chuckle to hear because Rattles hasn't a pleasant voice. In fact it is a very unpleasant voice. He didn't reply at once because he was too busy swallowing that big, fat minnow. It was so big that it stuck in his throat, and he had to twist and squirm and wriggle and gulp and gasp to get it down. But at last it was down. Then he looked across at Longlegs and chuckled again.

"If it was yours why didn't you catch it?" he asked. "I didn't even know you were over there. Not that it would have made any difference," he added with another harsh chuckle.

Rattles the Kingfisher Chuckled.

"for fish belong to whoever can catch them, and that fat minnow didn't belong to you because you hadn't caught it."

"It did too!" retorted Longlegs, and his voice was as harsh as Rattles' voice. "I was just going to catch it when you stole it. You're a thief, I tell you. I'm going to tell everybody that you're a thief. You stole my breakfast!"

Rattles chuckled again. You see, having that big fat minnow in his stomach he simply couldn't lose his temper. You know, temper is very largely a matter of an empty stomach. The stomach of Longlegs was empty and so his temper was very, very bad, while the stomach of Rattles was full, and so his temper was very, very good.

"Go, ahead! Go ahead. Longlegs!" said he. "You tell everybody that I'm a thief, and I'll tell everybody that you are a long-legged, long-necked, cross-grained, bad-tempered, lazy do-nothing, who waits for his meals to come to him instead of going after them. Everybody knows that I never stole anything in my life, and everybody knows that you are just what I have said you are. It is true I haven't many friends, but it is because I don't want them. But it is just as true that you haven't either. It is easy enough to call names, and I guess I can do that as well as you can. So go ahead. Calling me a thief doesn't make me one, and you know as well as I do that that minnow didn't belong to anybody until it was caught. Just to pay you for losing your temper, I'm going to stay right here by the Smiling Pool, and you ought to know, if you don't, that I can beat you fishing every time. If you'll take my advice you'll go over to the Big river. You'll fill your stomach sooner there, and then you'll feel better."

Longlegs opened his mouth for an angry retort, then closed it without saying a word. He knew that what Rattles said was true, and to tell the truth he was a wee bit ashamed. Finally he spread his big wings and flapped away in the direction of the Big river. Rattles the Kingfisher chuckled noisily. Then he fixed his bright eyes on the Smiling Pool to watch for minnows.

HALF A DOZEN SAUCES

A WELL made and appropriate sauce will take an ordinary meat dish out of its class, making it a real creation. The following are a few that are different:

Breton Beef Sauce.

Take one tablespoonful each of sugar, horseradish and made mustard, mix with four tablespoonfuls of vinegar.

Lamb Sauce.

Pour one-fourth cupful of boiling water over four tablespoonfuls of chopped mint leaves, let stand until cold, then add two tablespoonfuls of

AN OLD MAN'S ENVY

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

ALL an old man's tasks are done,
One by one
All his races have been run.

Now he sits beside the fire,
Old Grandsire,
Little now his limbs to tire.

All of youth's task lie ahead,
Roads to tread,
Things to master, and to dread.

Age is like an ancient mill,
Gray and still,
All the grist ground that it will.

Youth can never quiet sit,
Smoke a bit,
With all life ahead of it.

Youth must up and on its way,
While the gray
Sit and think and smoke all day.

Youth must up and sow the grain,
Shift the crane—
And I hear youth's voice complain.

All an old man's tasks are done,
And his fun—
Let me tell you this, my son:

Nothing would seem hard to do
If you knew
How an old man envies you.

vinegar and enough orange marmalade to make a thick sauce.

Unusual Meat Sauce.

Mix together two tablespoonfuls of brown sugar, one teaspoonful of grated chocolate, one-half cupful of preserved currants, one tablespoonful of shredded orange peel and the same amount of capers. Pour over these ingredients a cupful of vinegar and let stand for several hours. Before serving strain off the extra vinegar.

Olive Sauce.

Mix together one tablespoonful each of melted butter and flour, add one cupful of good stock. Stir and cook until smooth and thick. Add a scant teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce and one dozen finely chopped olives. Season with a little salt and pepper. Let the mixture simmer gently for three minutes.

Egg Sauce for Fish.

Mash the yolks of three hard cooked eggs with two tablespoonfuls of butter, one tablespoonful of rich cream and two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice. Another is prepared with a white sauce, two hard cooked eggs chopped fine and salt and pepper to taste. Allow two eggs to each pint of white sauce. This is good served with cauliflower.

Mustard Sauce.

To one teaspoonful of evaporated milk add one teaspoonful of mustard, mix well and then beat in eight tablespoonfuls of olive oil, drop by drop, and one tablespoonful of vinegar.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—God's Daily Gifts.

I. Lusting for the Fleshpots of Egypt (vv. 1-12).

1. Murmuring against Moses and Aaron (vv. 1-3). As they journeyed from Elim into the great wilderness, they became conscious of the scarcity of some of the things they had enjoyed even in Egyptian slavery. Only a few days before they were singing God's praises for their wondrous deliverance at the Red sea (Exod. 15). Many complain bitterly of their experience in the service of God, while at the same time they will endure all sorts of hardships uncomplainingly when pursuing their own selfish interests. Their complaint not only displayed ingratitude but a deep-seated impiety. They went so far as to express the wish that they had died in Egypt with full stomachs rather than to be walking in the wilderness by faith. The very fact that God had gone to so much trouble to deliver them should have convinced them that he would not forsake them now.

2. God's answer to their murmurings (vv. 4-12).

(a) He promised to rain bread from heaven (vv. 4, 5). His purpose was to teach them that man liveth not by bread alone, but by every word that proceeded out of the mouth of the Lord (Deut. 8:3).

(b) He promised to give them a vision of his glory (vv. 6-10). This served as a warning and encouragement. Moses and Aaron told the children of Israel that the glory of the Lord should be seen in the morning as a reminder that their murmuring was against the Lord and not against themselves.

(c) He promised them flesh and bread (vv. 11, 12). "At even ye shall eat flesh, and in the morning ye shall be filled with bread."

11. Quails and Manna Given (vv. 13-15). At the appointed time God gave the Israelites the promised food. He first allowed them to feel their need to show them that man's highest need is not physical food, but living faith and fellowship with God. He followed this with a display of his glory, showing them that he was able and willing to supply their need if they would but trust and obey him.

2. In the evening the quails came up (v. 13). Since they desired flesh, he gave them flesh to eat. God frequently caters to the desires of his people, knowing that the best way to teach them is to allow them to be filled with their own folly.

3. In the morning God gave the manna (vv. 14, 15). The Israelites did not know what it was. Moses told them it was the bread which the Lord had given them to eat.

III. The Responsibilities of the Israelites (vv. 16-31).

1. They must gather a certain portion daily (v. 16). They must look to God for their daily bread (Matt. 6:11).

2. Every man must gather for himself (v. 16). Every man must appropriate Christ for himself.

3. They must not gather in excess of one day's supply (vv. 18-20). Those whose greed prompted them to do so realized their mistake when it became corrupt and bred worms. Christian grace and Bible truth must not be hoarded up—they are only good when put to use.

4. The manna must be gathered fresh every morning (v. 21). This was to be done early before the sun was up. So must we seek Christ, who is our manna, every day, and the first thing in the day (John 6:57).

5. The manna must be eaten to preserve life. They were in a wilderness, so could live only by the eating of the food which God gave. It is so with Christ, "except ye eat the flesh of the Son of Man and drink his blood, ye have no life in you" (John 6:53).

6. Due consideration should be given to the Sabbath day (vv. 22-31). A double portion was to be gathered the day before, so as to keep inviolate the Sabbath day.

IV. Manna Kept as a Memorial (vv. 32-36).

This was to be kept as a reminder of God's favor in feeding them in the wilderness, even for supplying them with bread for forty years until they reached the promised land.

SYNOPSIS

Ragged, and starving, a boy of about sixteen is found in the woods by a camping party, having fled from his brutal father, Bat Morryson. Fed, and in clean clothes, the boy Shad (Sheridan) is sent to Canton, with a letter to Colonel Blake. The colonel, his wife, and their young daughter Ruth, are impressed by the boy's manner. He goes to work in Amity Dam, and becomes friendly with a youth of his age, "Bumpy," and Bumpy Brown, tinker, village character. Bat Morryson comes, determined to take his son back to his own dissolute life. He is overawed by Colonel Blake, the district attorney, and his father passes out of Shad's life. A girl, young and pretty, comes to Brown's shack, inquiring for him. Shad applies himself diligently to his neglected education. Love for Ruth Blake takes a strong hold on his heart. In an attack made on the Perry family, Oscar Perry, the father, is fatally shot, and his daughter, Mrs. Doolittle, wife of Cyrus Doolittle, prominent citizen, seriously wounded. Circumstantial evidence points to Bumpy Brown as the assailant. He is arrested.

"Yes, but he may have thought that Shad was wounded and losing blood and going slowly or lying dead in the trail. If he saw him topple out of the canoe it would have been his natural inference that he had hit his mark. I do not like this touch of mystery. Some one seems to see in one or more of these three articles a source of danger for himself. They were put away in the rush and excitement of the fleeing criminal and as soon as it could be safely done, some dark night, they were to be gathered up and destroyed or perhaps hidden somewhere near the shack of Bumpy Brown. You know, the thought has come to me more than once that the revolver and cartridges were planted on the old man."

"These are interesting speculations, but they do not impress me," said the judge. "The big man our young friend saw may have got his bearings and gone to his camp or he may be coming here any minute and telling of his adventure near Center pond."

In the moment of silence that followed the judge's words Shad spoke out:

"He'll never come here. He is the murderer. He knows that I know it."

Shad told them of that moment near the abandoned camp when the moonlight had shown him a masked face.

"And did he not call out when he heard you running away?"

"No, sir," Shad answered.

"That is rather strange business," said the judge. "Why did he mask himself?"

"It was a cunning bit of prudence," the colonel answered. "Suppose he had come upon the boy lying wounded in the trail. The stranger could then have robbed him of his treasures without being identified. Or, again, after dark, a light might be flashed in his face any moment. That indeed is what happened. A sudden light out of the heavens fell upon him. Shad is not much wiser because of it. That beam of moonlight showed us only the blackness of the man's soul."

"It is a reasonable theory," the judge agreed.

The colonel was examining the two hats which Shad had brought in his basket. Suddenly he whistled and exclaimed: "Well! What does this mean? Look here, Judge."

Inside the sweat band of the light-colored slouch hat some one had written with pen and ink those words:

"To R. R.: It's a long head that never turns."

"This is undoubtedly the hat worn by the murderer," said the colonel. "All who saw him agree as to the kind of hat he wore, and it was found with the handkerchief. This writing is that of a young woman accustomed to the use of a pen. She was a playful person of some sort. Who is she and who is R. R.?"

"Robert Royce, maybe," Shad promptly answered.

"Sure enough! There are the two R's," said the colonel. "He was a son of Mrs. Doolittle by her first husband. He is tall. I remember that he swore at the examination that he closed his shop at five o'clock and went upstairs to read. He came downstairs and let Cyrus Doolittle out of his front door soon after eight. He would have had three hours in which to go to Amity Dam, commit the crime and return to his shop."

He carefully wrapped the articles which he had been examining, and added: "I shall take good care of these things and go out of the woods tomorrow."

He took Shad's hand and spoke these words, which mark a turning point in the career of Sheridan Morryson:

"Pard, I like you. I'm going to take you into my office if you don't mind, and try to make a lawyer of you. I guess we can get along together. I want you to go to bed now and get a good rest. You must be tired."

He bolted the door and put braces in the windows. The two men and the boy went to their beds above stairs. Shad observed that the colonel put the package under his pillow. The boy had been much elated by the colonel's words.

The morning was chilly and the clouds were threatening. The party set out with rifles and loaded packs soon after eight. The trusty old guide led them. As they neared the abandoned lumber camp, Colonel Blake said to the guide:

"I'll take the lead here."

He walked slowly, looking intently at the ground. In a wet spot near a deep puddle he stopped, saying:

"Here are Shad's tracks and here are the tracks of the man who followed him coming and going. He wore hunting boots."

The colonel took a rule from his pocket and measured the tracks, the judge noting the figures.

"By jove!" the latter exclaimed. "They are almost identical with those of the rubber tracks of the murderer. I am convinced that this man could have worn Bumpy's rubbers."

"Yes, we're in deeper water than we thought," the colonel remarked as he folded his rule.

They followed the footprints to the very edge of Center pond. The canoe was gone. They could dimly see it on the far shore.

"He went out of the woods last night and was in a hurry," said the colonel.

They turned back and made for the clearing. Half a mile or so back of St. Germain's cabin the tracks of the stranger were no longer visible. At some point, which they did not discover, he had left the trail.

Shad and the two officials tramped over the lonely sand road to South Bolton. About two miles below St. Germain's they saw where a team and wagon had come off the plain into the road and gone on toward the settlement some time before.

At South Bolton they went to Hubbard's store. Shad had told Colonel Blake of the attractive young lady he had once seen at Bumpy Brown's shack and who worked in that store. The young woman had gone to Ashfield that morning. She would be returning the next day.

"Who is this young woman and where is her home?" Colonel Blake inquired of the merchant.

"She is from Malone," the latter answered. "Her name is Caroline De Long. Robert Royce introduced her to me in Ashfield one day about a year ago. He had known her and her people in Malone. She said that she was not very well; that she had heard that South Bolton was a healthy place near the edge of the big woods and that she would like to work in my store. I needed help, so I took her to work here in the store."

"Have you been pleased with her?"

"Well, yes—pretty well on the whole. I've found her honest and good at figures."

"I have heard that she is very handsome and that she dresses well," Colonel Blake went on.

"Yes, she's as proud as a peacock, and my wife thinks that she dresses too well for a girl who has to work for a living and that she gads around too much."

"Who does she gad around with?"

"Well, mostly Robert Royce. I don't know as we can complain of that. Royce is a single man and I kind o' think he's fond of her."

"Do you happen to know old Bumpy Brown, the tinker who lives down on the Racquette?"

"Oh, everybody knows him! They think that he's the man who done the shooting down to Doolittle's."

"Does Miss De Long know him?"

"Yes, and we've all been wondering about that. He was up here tinkering. He came to the store to see Carrie. They seemed to be well acquainted. He said that he knew her people. The last time he was here Carrie spent the evening with him on the hotel piazza. My wife thinks that he gives her money."

"What does she say about his indictment?"

"She says he is a harmless old man who wouldn't hurt anybody."

"You will remember that Bumpy bought a pair of rubbers here a few days before the murder. Who sold them to him?"

"Miss De Long."

"Who bought rubbers of the same size about that time?"

"I've been thinking about that. You know, Robert Royce came in the day after the tinker was here. Another man was with Royce. I didn't know him. There were going into the woods. The stranger bought a raincoat. They went over to the hotel for their dinner. Later Royce came back in a hurry. He wanted arctic overshoes. He had on a pair of raw rubbers. I knew that he had bought 'em over at the other store. He said that they pinched his feet. I took them off. The size mark was on the sole. It was the exact size and shape of the pair that I sold to Bumpy Brown. I thought of it when I heard about the rubber tracks of the murderer."

"Will you describe the man you call the stranger?"

"He was a tall man with a freckled face and red hair and very big ears."

This ended the conversation with Hubbard.

"I am more than ever convinced that we have been misled and that Bumpy is not in the case," said Colonel Blake as they sat down to dinner.

"A little more evidence will make me agree with you," was the answer of the judge. "I happen to know that Royce has a motive. I drew the will of his mother, who, as you know, is Mrs. Doolittle. She leaves all her property—considerable sum—to her son Robert Royce."

The colonel's face grew serious.

"You will remember from his testimony at Brown's examination that he has no alibi. We had better say no more of this until the ground under our feet is a little more solid. Remember, Shad, you mustn't know too much. Keep still till we have found our way."

Shad promised to hold his tongue but he could hardly conceal his elation over the clearing outlook for his friend the tinker.

"There is one circumstance that must give us pause," said the judge. "The murderer did not seem to be eager to kill Mrs. Doolittle. True, he shot at her, but, entering as he did, he had to begin shooting at once and create a panic. He couldn't hesitate then. A few seconds later he had his chance to kill Mrs. Doolittle. He stood close in front of her with the revolver pointing at her face. He could have killed her then but he didn't shoot. He struck her. She fell and fled out of his way."

"Consider the psychological situation," the colonel began. "She was his mother. Apart from her he could plan her death but, face to face with the woman who had borne him, he weakened. He would have been glad to get out of the house without killing but he couldn't."

"Well, we shall all be wiser in a week," the colonel remarked as they arose from the table.

They hired a team at the livery stable and set out for Ashfield and the county seat. They stopped at Amity Dam to pick up Shad's clothing, then at the home of the judge in Ashfield. The colonel was urged to spend the night there.

"No, thank you," he answered. "Shad and I have got some business to do in the village before we take the evening train to Canton."

They left their baggage at the hotel and discharged the team. They went to Royce's shop on the island. Royce was not there.

On the street a tradesman stopped them with interesting news. While fishing he had found a tan coat and overalls on the river shore below the bridge. The colonel went to his store and took possession of them. It was undoubtedly the suit worn by the murderer.

"Do you know whom it belongs to?" the colonel asked.

"No," was the answer. "They say Robert Royce wore a suit like that when he worked in his barn."

They were out on the street when Colonel Blake said to his young friend:

"Pard, we have two hours before train time. You know, of course, that clothes are an important part of life on this planet. Your grand new suit has been swum in. Its pristine purity has departed. The cruel rusticity of Amity Dam is on you. Come with me and I will complete your emancipation."

They went to a clothing store.

"Here, sir, is a young friend of mine," Colonel Blake said to the genial clerk. "I wish you to deprive him of this Amity Dammed appearance. Let us hurl economy to the winds and go to work."

IMPORTANCE OF BEING IMPORTANT

Matter of Moment, as You Look at It.

"The importance of being important is, it seems to me, too disturbingly impressive to the people who would like to be, or, at any rate, seem to be, important," said Mr. Cato Ninetails. "If course, there are people who are undoubtedly important, but it is not so much the result of their special efforts to be important as of a combination of circumstances and their individual talents. That is to say, they are not important merely because they want to be important, but because of the natural order of things. There are other people who are not important, but who seem to be important. I don't know whether this is merely the result of chance or is brought about by good management. Which ever it is, it seems to require no great effort by them, and they undoubtedly fool a great many people. Sometimes I suspect that they even fool themselves. There are still others of high ambition—or perhaps strong egotism—who notwithstanding their vast expenditure of effort, thought and imagination, are unable to make themselves seem important; and their persistence is a trial to their own nerves, and an irritation or, even worse, a bore to their acquaintances."

"Now, it seems to me that being important must be rather burdensome, and seeming to be important is even more so. On him who is important many things are loaded, that, by rights, should be carried by other people, but with his peculiar talents I doubt that he finds oppressive a load that would crush most of the rest of us. Importance is his job in the world, and he is built to endure it. It is not likely that the burden of imitation importance—that is, that carried by the people who seem important—is nearly so heavy; added to the workaday pack of him who is important it is probable that it would hardly be noticed; but for the carriers it is sometimes so great that close observation shows that now and then they stagger under it for all their knack of maintaining misleading appearances. There is a hard life, but they like it because so many people think that they are important."

"My sympathy goes out to those who want to seem important, and can't. They strive so hard, and achieve so little. Nor do they ask much, for while they would undoubtedly like to be important, they would be fairly well content if they could just manage to seem important. Life with them must be a succession of disappointments, of trial and error, with error predominating. It seems to me that somebody whose oral flow and command of expression were equal to it should explain to them that they do not know when they are well off, for not being important is one of the easiest—if not the easiest—of life's assignments. He who is important pays for it with hard work, however equal to the task he may be; he who seems to be important pays for it with worry, whatever the degree of tranquility he may present to the world; he who fails in his efforts to seem important must find a bitter tang in all life's savors; on the other hand, he who is willing to leave the job of being important, or seeming important, to others is relieved of many of life's most arduous requirements. His responsibilities are lighter, for he does not, like the people who are important or who seem important, have to be all things to all men. It is his privilege to get out of the hurly burly for a contemplative period now and then, and thank his lucky stars that he has no aspirations that interfere with a quiet and comfortable life."

"What things do you regard as important nowadays?" I asked Buck.

"How would I know?" he responded.

"Why shouldn't you know?"

"Only the historians of century hence will be able to tell what was important nowadays,"—Indianapolis News.

Old Custom Retained

The letters "L. S." on legal documents are the abbreviation of Latin "locus signilli," meaning place for the seal. The Romans used to take off their signet rings and imprint their seals on all documents, and the present legal practice is a survival of that custom.

Slapped by "Her Majesty"

At the age of eighty-six a scientist and electrician won a fresh reputation by delivering one of the wittiest and most entertaining after-dinner speeches ever heard in the Savoy hotel, London, writes Henri Pickard in the Cincinnati Enquirer. This pioneer octogenarian was Col. C. E. Crompton, the Faraday medalist of 1922, who was accorded a complimentary dinner by admirers, friends and colleagues.

In a voice that could easily be heard throughout the large hall, Colonel Crompton acknowledged the compliments paid him by telling some amusing stories of his early scientific days.

"I am about the only person who has ever been slapped by such a model of dignity as Queen Victoria," he declared. "That happened in '81 or '82, when I introduced into Windsor castle the type of lighting which you see in this room today. Of course, it is common now, but at that time it was a novelty."

"Her majesty said she had never seen anything like it before and promptly slapped my face."

Ten Times Biggest Circus Here Soon

The world's largest circus, traveling on four trains of double length steel railroad cars, with 1600 people 50 elephants, 1009 menagerie animals and 700 horses will exhibit on the Powers race track in Joliet on Sunday, July 31st and thruout this section plans are perfecting for the attendance of every man, woman and child—so it seems—at one of the performances.

Everybody wishes to see the Ringling Bros., and Barnum & Bailey circus this year, and it is a foregone conclusion that the world's largest tent, seating 16,000 persons, will be filled to the last chair afternoon and night. Seven rings and stages and the hipporome track, to say nothing of the vast maze of aerial and wire display rigging, will be filled by the earth's foremost arenic talent—eight hundred acknowledged kings and queens of daring, grace, skill and incredible agility. One hundred clowns will project ten times that number of mirth waves. Countless new foreign features and innovations new to America are introduced on the gigantic program of the Greatest Show on Earth this year.

By popular demand a tribe of monstrous mouthed Ubangi Savages from Africa's darkest depths are presented in the main performances

A herd of the largest and tallest giraffes in captivity; 26 zebras and the same number of camels, two rhinoceroses and the seven herds of elephants will be seen in the huge menagerie tent, where 1009 rare wild animals pace to and fro in ornate dens and cages.

Thruout circus day the three gigantic tented stables of the Ringling Bros., and Barnum & Bailey organization will be open to the public free of charge. Here lovers of fine horses may view at random hundreds of the world's most beautiful thoroughbreds. Perfect specimens of almost every known strain will be found in the big show's great free horse fair which also includes a congress of tiny Shetland ponies to delight the little folks.

A New Memorial to the North Pole Discoverer

REAR ADMIRAL
R. E. PEARY

The Proposed Monument at Cape York

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

LAST month there sailed from New York a romantic expedition. It went aboard the schooner Effie M. Morrissey, commanded by Capt. Bob Bartlett, and its destination was Cape York, Greenland, 76 degrees north. On one of the high cliffs at Cape York the members of the party will erect a monument, rising 60 feet in the air and tapering to a shining cap of non-corrosive steel which will catch the beams of the midnight sun and act as a beacon to ships which come that far into the Arctic regions. This monument will be a memorial to one of the greatest Arctic explorers in history, the man who first reached the North Pole, Admiral Robert E. Peary of the United States navy.

The story of Peary's career and his final attainment of the North pole, the goal of explorers from every nation for centuries, is the story of an heroic American to whom there was literally "no such word as failure." More than that, he has justly been called "the first perfect Arctic scientist" for in his preparations for his Polar expeditions he never left anything to chance.

While still a student in Bowdoin college Peary became interested in the Arctic regions and took a well planned course in Arctic geography, polar science and dietetics. His civil engineer degree from Bowdoin had been the result of a carefully planned course to fit himself for polar exploration. He applied and was given a commission in the navy in 1881 and during his tour of duty in Central America spent all his leisure studying further in polar navigation. In 1886 he secured leave of absence to test out his theoretical knowledge by a short trip to Greenland.

His next trip, 1891, was such another reconnaissance of the ice cap. He went north up the Greenland coast to within a few miles of Elisha Kent Kane's old base and proceeded with three companions on a sledge trip across the island. At a point 130 miles from camp, he sent two companions back, they having fulfilled their mission of carrying reserve food for the two who were to make the final dash. He completed the overland journey on July 4, 1892, scaled a cliff 4,000 feet high to get down to the sea, making on the outward journey nearly 600 miles, a record for snow exploration. In returning to camp, he struck directly across the island, reaching an altitude of 8,000 feet and traveling 500 miles.

In 1893, accompanied by his wife, he returned to a location just north of the great glacier that had defeated Kane. It was at this camp that, on September 12, his daughter was born.

On March 6, 1894, Peary started inland across the ice again with eight men and ninety-two dogs. At an elevation of 5,500 feet and 134 miles from camp, he was snowbound; his dogs began dying, and his men were frost-bitten. A general advance was manifestly impossible; so caching his reserve stores and sending back the disabled men, he pushed on indomitably with only three companions. In fourteen days thereafter, he made only eighty-five miles; to try further was inviting catastrophe, and so he retreated to camp, arriving with only 26 of his original 92 dogs.

When the relief ship came for him during the summer, he decided, in spite of his short supplies, to remain with two volunteers and other winter to achieve what he had failed to do the last winter. His wife and child and the rest of the party returned to the states. From Eskimo neighbors he got four volunteers and increased his dog pack to 63; with these and his two companions he started across again. The third day, out one of the Eskimos deserted, but undeterred, the intrepid explorer continued. His cache of the preceding winter could not be found so that failure seemed certain. He ordered the Eskimos back and with 41 dogs and his two men continued.

Reaching the eastern coast toward the end of May, he killed 10 musk ox and with food for 17 days and a frozen man who had to be hauled on the sledge he began a push for camp against starvation. Almost exhausted he reached camp June 25. Having achieved his objective, he returned to the states on the relief ship which came for him a month later.

In 1898 he was back for a four-year attempt for the pole. He put his ship in for the winter near Cape Sabine, just south of Greely's tragic camp. Through ice floes and crevasses he followed the coast, sending Eskimos and men back as they became exhausted or injured, finally on January 6 reaching Greely's observatory on Lady Franklin Bay. On February 18, 1899, they were back at the ship. It was found necessary to amputate seven of the commander's toes which had been frozen and further exploration that summer was abandoned. In March 1900, he moved up to Fort Conger, making all along the coast caches of food against a forced retreat. On April 15, he crossed the ice with his faithful negro servant, Henson, who accompanied him on every expedition, and five Eskimos, to the Greenland coast, and pushed north on sledges.

Skirting the north point of Greenland, proving finally that Greenland was an island that did not extend to the pole, he made complete maps of the whole region. From Fort Conger, during the winter of 1900-1901, he made short trips to the north preparatory to an advance in the spring. This attempt for the pole he was forced to abandon north of Grant Land and returned to Fort Conger for another winter. He left Fort Conger on February 24 for another try for the pole; after making a new farthest north, 84:17, he again met a great open lane in the ice and had to abandon the attempt. He returned to the states in September, 1902.

Undaunted, he renewed his attempt in 1905. Again at 84:36 in Grant Land he came across the open lead and for six days was unable to cross. When the young ice formed he made a dash to cross the lead. Most of the sledges made the passage when a gale sprang up, breaking up the thin ice, with most of the provisions still on the south side. There was nothing to do but push on to the north. At 85:12 a storm of snow held them up inactive in camp for six days. Meanwhile, they steadily drifted some 70 miles southward.

On April 21 they had reached 87:36, a new farthest north; realizing the foolhardiness of further advance, Peary faced south for the return to camp.

His final expedition came in 1908. Accompanied by 11 scientists, ice experts and Matt Henson, his faithful servant, he returned to the base on Grant Land. On March 1, with a great ice army of 6 men 17 Eskimos, 133 dogs and 19 sledges, in two divisions under himself and Captain Bartlett, he started straight out over the ice. They made good speed to the north until the opening of the spring season began to make the pack disintegrate. As men became exhausted or incapacitated from frost, Peary sent them back. As provisions became lower, more of the party were sent back, in order to enable those remaining to continue. By March 22, with less than 140 miles between him and the pole, Peary was alone with his negro, Henson, and four Eskimos. In forced marches, feeding full rations and pushing forward as rapidly as possible, he found himself on the morning of April 6 at 89:57—less than three miles from his goal. A few hours later he was at the point where it was south no matter where he looked.

At the spot where his observations determined the North pole to be Peary planted the American flag given him by his wife fifteen years before for that purpose. The colors of his college fraternity, of the Navy league and of the Red Cross were added and records of the event left. Thirty hours were consumed in observations, rest and preparations for the hazardous journey back.

But when Peary returned to civilization to reap the rewards of his achievement, it was to find that he had a bitter controversy on his hands. Dr. Frederick Cook, who had accompanied previous Peary expeditions as a surgeon, had claimed that he had reached the pole on April 21, 1908, ten months before Peary. At first Cook's claims were accepted by scientists, then rejected as insufficiently proved. Peary's data were accepted by the National Geographic society as positive proof that he had reached the pole. Later from other sources recognition came to Peary—medals from learned societies, the acclaim of rulers and scientists, a pension and the rank of rear admiral from his own country. When he died on February 20, 1920, the world joined in honoring his memory and now 12 years later his name is heard again throughout the world as those who knew him and loved him best prepare to pay the fitting tribute of erecting to his memory a monument in the land he won his fame.

HEMP'S LARGE PART IN HUMAN HISTORY

Has Well-Merited Title of King of Fibers.

Hemp flashed into the pages of history more than 5,000 years ago, and for centuries was the king of fibers. Today, cheaper fibers are competing with hemp in the cordage factory.

Hemp sails dropped out of sight with the manufacture of cotton sails and the development of marine engines; hemp rope met a bitter rival that unseated it when mariners discovered that abaca fiber, which is called Manila "hemp," was cheaper, would float, and did not require the application of tar; hemp cotton-bale wrapping bowed to Indian jute and waste cotton; and 20 years ago carpet manufacturers substituted cotton and jute warping for hemp.

Hemp is a cousin of the mulberry tree and a native of Asia. Since 2800 B. C., when a Chinese emperor taught his subjects to cultivate hemp and to make hemp cloth for clothing, hemp has frequently appeared in historic records. The Chinese also ate the seeds and extracted an oil from the plant.

Hemp followed civilization westward. Before the Christian era the Indians, Arabian and Persians were cultivating hemp for drugs, which they learned to extract from the plant. The Scythians took hemp with them to Europe 3,500 years ago. Hemp's drugs attracted North Africans to the plant and the strength of its fiber—hemp is the strongest of all fibers—brought it into wide use on the sailing vessels of the Mediterranean.

Hemp invaded the Western hemisphere in 1545 when some seeds from Spain reached Chile. North America began to cultivate hemp shortly after the Puritans settled in Massachusetts, but the southern colonies were more successful with their plantations. Laws promoting the hemp industry were passed by the early legislatures of colonial Virginia. Lancaster, Penn., was the center of a large hemp-producing region during the Revolution.

First Rural Free Mail Back in 1896

Rural free delivery of mail originated from the suggestion of Postmaster General John W. Wainwright, who incorporated it in his annual report for the fiscal year 1841.

The following year, on January 5, James O'Donnell of Michigan introduced a bill in the house of representatives authorizing rural mail delivery. His bill carried an appropriation of $6,000,000, and did not pass. Later Thomas E. Watson, a congressman from Georgia, sponsored a bill which appropriated $10,000 for experimental rural mail delivery. This was passed by congress March 3, 1893, and on July 16, 1894, a sum of $20,000 was appropriated for the same purpose. But the postmaster general did not deem these amounts sufficient for the proper introduction of an experimental service, so they were not used.

On June 9, 1896, the sum of $10,000, together with the former appropriations of $30,000, was made available, and the first experimental rural mail delivery service was established on October 1 of that year, simultaneously on three routes, one from Charles Town, one from Uvilla, and one from Halltown, all in West Virginia.

The results were so satisfactory that nine months after the establishment of the first routes the service had grown to 82 routes, and by 1902 there were more than 11,000 in operation.

Spot Without Rain

There is no need to go so far afield as Australia and South America to find a really dry place. In Lorca, on the Mediterranean coast of Spain, there has been no rain to speak of for the past seven years, and more than 20,000 people have left for wetter latitudes. Why it should be so dry in this particular district is a puzzle which the weather experts cannot solve.

ORLAND DEFEATS OAK LAWN

The Orland Park baseball team scored a clean victory last Sunday over the Oak Lawn team with a score of 7 to 0. Next Sunday Orland will play Midlothian at Midlothian. Oak Lawn plays at Worth, Tinley plays at Lemont, Palos at Evergreen Pk. Next Sunday, July 31 the Frankfort baseball team will play Homewood team at Homewood.

ORLAND PARK

The following article appeared in the Lemont Optimist last week and as we thought it might be of interest to Orland Park folks we pass it on:

"We created considerable stir by our story regarding examinations for postmaster at Palos Park, which was a front page item in this paper last week. Word from our distinguished friend, Edward Cowan, mail carrier, realtor, after-dinner raconteur, and maker of postmasters, senators and such—well, anyway, word from Ed Cowan is as follows: "Head line 'Palos Park' should be 'Orland Park'. P. M. at Palos on the warpath; look out! Shoots on sight. EATS 'EM ALIVE! You better move to Buffalo." Word from John Andrus, postmaster at Orland, also claims that we are in error.

BUT, we never make mistakes. We refuse to be put in the wrong. We will arrange for the examination to be held in Palos. It may be delayed somewhat, but we shall never rest until they hold that examination some time—next year, or ten years from now. Meanwhile, we refuse to move to Buffalo. We shall move the wife and family to Wisconsin where they will be safe from harm and shall remain here to fight this matter to a finish. We are not afraid of Ed Cowan.

P. S. Just on the chance that Uncle Sam may decide to hold an examination for postmaster at Orland, you might apply, if interested. But, get your application in at once, as it must reach Washington by July 29."

W. T. Andres, daughter and son-in-law from Norfolk, Neb., are visiting Orland Park relatives.

Wert E. Humphrey and family of Chicago spent the week end here. John Yunker had the misfortune to break his leg when he got caught in a belt operating a grind stone from a tractor.

Fred E. Yunker has installed a New Idea grain elevator for Wm. Bernard.

Dr. W. R. Schussler has been suffering a severe attack of rheumatism. The picnic committee of the S. W. Towns Chamber of Commerce met with I. A. Cleveland Saturday night.

Chas. Erickson and Fred E. Yunker visited in Morris on business the past week.

The Firemen held a special meeting Monday night to arrange for their annual picnic on Labor Day.

A special meeting of the Orland Park Legion Post will be held next Tuesday night, August 2nd to perfect plans for the Legion picnic on August 7th. All members urged to attend.

Monee Cancels County Fair; Will Hold Homecoming

A homecoming celebration to be held Sept. 15 will take the place of the annual Monee fair this year. The celebration will be for one day only and will be held at the fair grounds. The day's program will include a baseball game, band concert and an elaborate display of fireworks. In the evening a dance will be staged.

Scores of former Monee residents are expected to return for the homecoming and arrangements are being made for an attendance of 6,000, Mr. Conrad said.
